

National Association of Liars

www.liars.org.uk

The National Association of Liars is to encourage the age old skill of misrepresentation and to promote and foster kinship between its members. The club hoped to forge international links with similarly untruthful organisations such as the Whitehouse and the advertising agency that came up with the slogan red bull gives wings (which it patently doesn't).

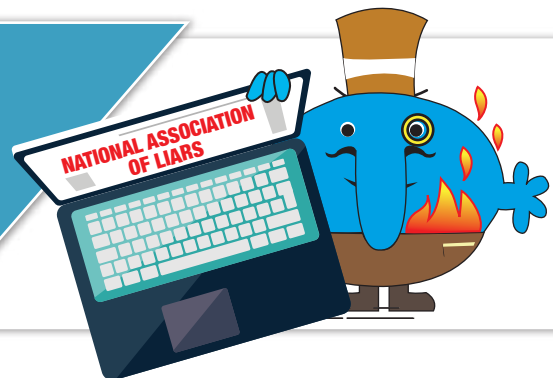

The foundation of the organisation is fabrication, falsification and obfuscation. The association's aspiration is the celebration of misinformation and education (via the creation and compilation of innovational documentation) that will be an inspiration to the population.

If you get more than 80% you can become a "Certified Liar" and print out your own certificate with your name on it. You can show this to your friends, post it on Facebook or tweet it on twitter and be the envy of the entire internet.
